It is inconceivable that congress will reject the president's pies. He tells congress plainly that to retain the discriminating exemption to constwise tolls would be national dishonor.

His caim and dispossionate statement

Under the solemn obligations of the Hay-Pannetotic treaty, we promised to open the canal to "all nations" upon terms of ab-solute equality.

It now is hold by some that "all na-tions" meant all nations except the United Satest: that on that pies we should exempt our constwise trade from toils.

THE ROAD CONGRESS.

The American Road congress, with its many atilid association, will meet its many atilid association of the condition offers as a worthwhile suggestion to the road-building authorities in Georgia that they make every effort to be well represented personally at the seesant of the congress. It is not the congress of the forement road-making authorities in America.

Demonstrations of road-working machinery and exhibits of model roads will be numbered by the soon is a banner good roads state. That Inet had a bearing on the decision of the congress to hold its conventions here.

But we yet have much to learn. We shah have larger responsibilities and possibilities on our hands when federal at becomes available, and like seems in the labor clause to the contrary notwithstanding.

The ordinaries, the county commissions and the road engineers of Georgia can learn volumes from these experts.

Mistakes of long standing and of personners from these caperts.

A GREAT MAN'S WIDOW.

A GREAT MAN'S WIDOW.

The death of Mrs. Robert Louis Stevenson, widow of the novellist and seasylar, will be in a way a matter of world-wide interest, or at least in those parts of the world-wide included to the many and the stevenson with the author of "Treasure Island," "The Master of Rellantrae" and other works that vie with those of Kipling in their shoer force of hypactism. She originally was the wife of Osbourne, who discovered that both his wife and Stevenson and formed a genuine, but an innoquit attachment. He reflected sagely that it were folly to hold to him legally a woman who caved for another man.

Stevenson had formed a genuine, but an innoquit attachment. He reflected sagely that it were folly to hold to him legally a woman who caved for another man.

Stevenson, mirable sicki, Osbourne was one of the calm and interested spectators. The thing might not duplicate itself in all particulars is another contagr. And the safe-sfacement of Osbourne was one of the calm and interestings. Stevenson's brain and previously stevenson's brain who had dared convention narred him temberly. To her intelligent care we are indebted for the subtle and strong masterpleose that slowly were flexible and strong masterpleose that slowly were like in the companionably of the woman whose path hat no peciliarly revosed his own.
